Aptana Studio 3.5 Aptana Studio 3.5 The biggest news in this release is its support for the new language as well as the updated support for older versions of the runtime. If you're a PHP developer, you can use the Aptana PHP plugin, which will generate or validate PHP5 code for you. The Aptana Studio 3.5 has expanded support for newer versions of PHP, which makes it a good solution for teams. It provides a console that allows a team to run, compile and debug PHP5 projects in a remote server. This feature is a big addition for PHP developers who find themselves tied to a certain version of the runtime. There's also an updated language support. Aptana Studio now supports the newer versions of Java 6. If you want to run your projects in a newer Java version, Aptana Studio will take care of that for you. The search bar in Aptana Studio is also enhanced. You can now conduct a search on any number of terms, and the results will appear in a tree view. When you select a result, it will open in the editor, which has many new features to help you with coding and refactoring. It has auto-complete for keywords, breakpoints and automatically generating documentation for you. The new Aptana Studio 3.5 supports syntax highlighting and navigating in files on a remote server, among other things. When it comes to getting started, it is fairly easy to configure, and there's a great online community. It has a lot of features that make it easy to code PHP5. The biggest drawback is that it doesn't fully support AJAX. It does offer debugging for PHP5 and other languages, but the current version doesn't include debugging for JavaScript. The Aptana
